

Daniel's devils

DANIEL Boulud takes his Halloween costumes as seriously as he takes his four-star cuisine. The chef was decked out in a red-hot racing suit loaned to him by Michael Schumacher, the seven-time Formula 1 champion, at an after-hours party in Restaurant Daniel's "spooky" lower-level prep kitchen. Other revelers celebrating the publication of "The Flavor Bible" by Karen Page and Andrew Dornenburg included chefs David Burke (as the Joker) and Balthazar's Riad Nasr with his face painted. Daisy May's BBQ chef Adam Perry Lang and "Top Chef" winner Hung Huynh donned wigs, while Drew Nieporent wrapped a life-like snake around his neck. But Baroness Sheri DeBorchgrave stole the show as a buxom, transgendered spider whose "male gender" kept falling out of her fishnet stockings.

Endquote . . . endquote

"I HAVE 12 [BlackBerries], but I usually don't have more than three on me" — Prudential Douglas Elliman super-broker Dolly Lenz to ForbesLife Executive Woman . . . "I WOULD rather be sexy like Simone Signoret or Anna Magnani than like — oy, vey — Paris Hilton" — Erica Jong to More.

More celebrity photos
at nypost.com

David Silpa/UPI

Gwyneth Paltrow looks swellegant in a revealing form-fitting gown and matched necklace and earrings at the Paris premiere of "Two Lovers."